

EXT. ABUELITO'S HOME/BACKYARD - MORNING

ABUELITO (75), leathery, sits under a tree with ANTONIO (11). He rubs a prickly pear on newspaper to remove needles then skins it with a knife. CHICKENS roam as TWO ROOSTERS posture challengingly.

ABUELITO [GRANPA]
Tómelo, Antonio. [Take it.]

Antonio bites into the prickly pear with obvious relish then glances at the roosters whose feathers are ruffled.

ANTONIO
Abuelito, are they going to fight?

ABUELITO
As sure as the sun will rise tomorrow.

ANTONIO
¿Por qué? [Why?]

ABUELITO
It's nature's way, mijito. They have to fight to find the strongest.

ANTONIO
Is it the same with men?

ABUELITO
No. We are the only ones God gave a choice to. A choice to fight or not to fight. Pero being the strongest isn't enough. He has to be the smartest, también.

ANTONIO
No entiendo? [I don't understand.]

ABUELITO
A smart man doesn't fight at all. Or he waits.

ANTONIO
For what, abuelito?

ABUELITO
For the right time. That's how a smart man wins. The strongest man is not the man who controls others. He is the one who can control himself.

ANTONIO
¿De veras? [Really?]

ABUELITO
De veras. God's son was so strong he never fought. He didn't have to.
